Weekly Report

Intelligence Oversight Legislation: The staff of the House Intelligence Committee has informed us that the Committee will not markup their version of the Intelligence Oversight Bill until after the Congressional Easter recess. The staff is also under instructions to resolve all problems with the bill raised by the Agency other than the 48-hour notification requirement. Chairman Stokes wants the 48-hour notification requirement to be the only controversial item left in the bill when it reaches the House floor. This will put pressure on the staff to reach agreement with the Agency on the definition of special activities, and several other provisions of concern contained in the bill

. -	1989
	The Executive Director, accompanied by the Deputy Directors and the Comptroller, will present our 1989 budget request to the House Intelligence Committee next week and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence the following week. The Executive Director's testimony for the budget hearings has been provided to the Deputy Directors and the directorate staffs. The ADDO will be the lead witness at a separate hearing before the House Intelligence Committee on the 1989 budget

-	briefings on the Agency's use of base resources. The briefings, which involved about a dozen offices or divisions from throughout the four directorates, went well and will require only minimal follow-up in terms of providing additional details to the staffers. This review of our base was one in a series that committee staffers are holding throughout the Intelligence Community.
